

Call for Applications: OsloMet Centre for Research on Pandemics & Society \(PANSOC\) Visiting Researcher Program

Announcement published by Benjamin Schneider on Monday, June 13, 2022

Type:

Fellowship

Date:

July 31, 2022

Location:

Norway

Subject Fields:

Health and Health Care, History of Science, Medicine, and Technology, Social History / Studies, Social Sciences, Public Health

The Centre for Research on Pandemics and Society (PANSOC) is an OsloMet Centre of Research Excellence studying the social and economic aspects of pandemics. The epidemiology and impact of pandemics have been profoundly shaped by socioeconomic status, ethnic background, and other social variables, affecting who falls ill, who dies, and who survives.

PANSOC welcomes applications from advanced PhD students and post-PhD academics at all career stages for a short visit to Oslo during the 2022–2023 academic year.

Visiting researchers will be expected to give one public talk on their research and one internal talk (for example, a methods workshop or discussion of current or future work). Visitors will also have the opportunity to discuss potential collaborations and proposals with PANSOC-affiliated researchers.

We encourage applications from researchers in all fields of social sciences and humanities with interests in the social aspects of historical, current, and future pandemics. We are particularly interested in topics such as:

- Disparities in disease outcomes or impacts of public health measures based on socioeconomic and other inequalities.
- Syndemic interactions with non-communicable diseases and chronic health conditions.
- Relationships between infectious disease epidemics and other crises such as wars or extreme climate events.

The visiting researcher program will cover transportation costs to Oslo and hotel accommodation for one week.

Please send a CV and cover letter with a short description (1–2 pages) of your research
