Research Fellowship: The Blavatnik Archive

Discussion published by Amber N. Nickell on Sunday, October 9, 2022

The Blavatnik Archive Research Fellowships provide up to $2500 a term for outstanding scholars to study and disseminate its primary source materials: over 120,000 items in 20th-century Jewish and world history, with a special emphasis on World War I, World War II, and Soviet Russia.

Generally, the fellowship is non-residency: researchers will work online, with behind-the-scenes access to over 34,000 digital assets in the Archive’s high-resolution, metadata-rich asset management system. In certain situations, if relevant, it also may be possible for Fellows to access the physical, non-digitized materials on a limited basis.

Master’s and Ph.D. students or degree-holders, Postdocs, Faculty, and Independent Investigators from any discipline are invited to apply. The variety and depth of the Archive materials (texts, films, posters, postcards, manuscripts) encourage and support interdisciplinary inquiry.

The selection of Fellows is based on the quality of their proposed research and its relationship to the Archive's collections.

Depending on the number of Fellows and their research results, bi-annual online discussions and/or an annual onsite colloquium may be offered.
