STIP: Funded MA and PhD Programs in German Studies at UMass Amherst (15.01.2023)

Discussion published by Sara E Jackson on Wednesday, December 21, 2022

The program in German Studies at the University of Massachusetts Amherst is accepting applications for admission to the MA and PhD programs for Fall 2023.

Admitted students are eligible for a multi-year funding package in the form of teaching assistantships. In the academic year 2022/23, assistantships provided tuition, health insurance coverage (with vision and dental benefits), and a stipend of approx. $23,000 (students can expect to pay $1500-$2000 out of pocket in annual fees).

German Studies at UMass is an interdisciplinary program with faculty teaching and research expertise in:

- Turkish-German Studies, German-Jewish Studies, and Minority Discourses
- Exile/Refugee, Migration, and Transnational Studies
- Cultural and Intellectual History (eighteenth to twentieth century)
- Film Studies, East German Cinema and GDR Studies
- Theater, Drama, and Performance
- Medieval Studies
- Feminist and Gender Studies

Students can learn more about the graduate program and review application requirements on the UMass German Studies website: https://www.umass.edu/german/graduate-studies-program-german

The priority deadline for applications is January 15, 2023. After January 15, the program reviews applications on a rolling basis until all available fellowship positions have been filled.

For questions or additional information, please contact the Graduate Program Director, Professor Sara Jackson: sarajackson@umass.edu

Diese Ankündigung wurde von H-GERMANISTIK [Constanze Baum] betreut – editorial-germanistik@mail.h-net.msu.edu