Happy new year!

Discussion published by Margaret DeLacy on Sunday, January 1, 2023

Friends:

With thanks to Sandra Ham, who has served as your editor throughout December, I am starting off the new year as your editor.

I would like to wish all of the (almost) 2,000 H-Scholar members a very happy and productive New Year.

During the past few years, H-Scholar, like most H-Net Networks has evolved from a list that hosted comments and discussions by subscribers to serving nearly entirely as an announcement list. Your editors have posted most of the content.

I'd like to hear from more of you!

To begin our new year, please share any new research project that you are launching in 2023. Please sign your post and tell us where you are living.

For those of you who would like a refresher on posting to H-Scholar or those who are new to our community, below are some tips on how to proceed.

Happy 2023

Margaret DeLacy, H-Scholar editor

Navigating our network:

If you go to the H-Scholar webpage at https://networks.h-net.org/h-scholar and you see a big orange "button" at the top right hand side of the page that says "Start a Discussion," you are ready to go. Just click the tab and discuss. Your comments will go into our "moderation queue" and will be approved and sent out by your editor of the month.

If you don't see that button, check out the links below to make sure your account is in working order.

The most common problem people have is that they initially subscribed using one email address but then added a new email that the system can't recognize. If you are reading this post in your email, chances are that is the one you used to subscribe.

How to create an account:

How to subscribe to a network

How to Post to a network

All Help Desk pages