

Public History in New York State

Announcement published by Ivan D. Steen on Monday, May 1, 2017

Type:

Call for Publications

Location:

New York, United States

Subject Fields:

Historic Preservation, Local History, Public History, Rural History / Studies, Urban History / Studies

A new series of books from SUNY Press:

Public History in New York State. University at Albany Center for Applied Historical Research, ed.

The field of public history has experienced significant growth as an academic discipline, but public history extends well beyond the academy. The State of New York is exceptionally rich in its number of museums, historic sites and archival repositories; and historic preservation not only is popular, but is written into law. A considerable amount of public history research is produced in New York by academic historians and practitioners in the field, but it does not always appear in print form. This series aims to publish the best of this work so that it may be disseminated to a wide audience.

Send inquiries and proposals to:

Ivan D. Steen

Co-Director, Center for Applied Historical Research

Department of History

University at Albany, State University of New York

Albany, NY 12222

email: isteen@albany.edu

SUNY Press guidelines for submissions may be found at:
<http://www.sunypress.edu/l-45-submissions-guidelines.aspx>

Contact Info:

Ivan D. Steen

Co-Director, Center for Applied Historical Research, University at Albany, State University of New York

Contact Email:

isteen@albany.edu