

Summer Reading?

Discussion published by Clint Twist on Friday, June 15, 2018

I am a Mao magpie and have recently acquired a palimpsest object:

a 1954 PLA Condolence Handbook that was given to someone in Nanjing “南京8000000000000000” in April 1957. The book remained unused until 1964 when a diary was begun.

There are sporadic, often lengthy, entries from 1964.2.29 to 1966.11.17 covering 86 closely written pages. There is one entry dated 1970 and a final one in 1986, which may be associated with some very minor redactions on a few of the earlier pages.

I cannot even begin to read Chinese handwriting, so I have no idea whether the entries are interesting or significant in any way.

I have photographed three pages (from '64, '65, and '66), and I am happy to send these to anyone who would like to take a look.
