

Summer in Cuba with North Carolina State University

Announcement published by Nicholas Robins on Monday, October 8, 2018

Type:

Summer Program

Date:

February 15, 2019

Location:

North Carolina, United States

Subject Fields:

Latin American and Caribbean History / Studies, Health and Health Care, Political History / Studies, Public Health, African American History / Studies

The Department of History of North Carolina State University is excited to announce the 2019 the interdisciplinary "History, Environment and Culture in Havana, Cuba" program, based in Havana with excursions to other regions. The program runs for three weeks, May 18 - June 8, 2019.

Students may take one or both of the following three credit courses: "Environmental History of Cuba," (HI 318) and "Cuba Today: Historical and Sociopolitical Perspectives" (HI 317) Both courses are offered in English, and although it is preferred that students have completed two semesters of Spanish, it is not a requirement. Graduate student applications are also welcome, however course requirements are different.

Please note that the application due date is February 15, 2019, although applications are accepted on a rolling basis.

Thanks very much for helping spread the word!

Contact Info:

Nicholas A. Robins, Ph.D.
Teaching Professor
Department of History
North Carolina State University
Withers Hall 467
Raleigh, NC, 27695-8108

Contact Email:

narobins@ncsu.edu

URL:

http://packabroad.ncsu.edu/index.cfm?FuseAction=Programs.ViewProgram&Program_ID=3538