

Conference: "Borders, Boundaries, and Lines in the Civil War," Sept. 29-30

Discussion published by Sarah Elliott on Wednesday, September 27, 2017

Type:

Conference

Date:

September 29, 2017 to September 30, 2017

Location:

Mississippi, United States

Subject Fields:

American History / Studies, Military History, Native American History / Studies, Slavery, Women's & Gender History / Studies

The Center for Civil War Research and the Arch Dalrymple III Department of History invite you to attend the eleventh annual Conference on the Civil War to be held September 29-30 in Oxford, Mississippi. This year's theme is "Borders, Boundaries, and Lines in the Civil War." Dr. Christopher Phillips of the University of Cincinnati will deliver the keynote address entitled "Southern Cross, North Star: The Cultural Politics of Race and Irreconciliation on the Post-Civil War Middle Border" on Friday, September 29 at 6:30pm in room 107 of the Croft Institute. The 2017 Wiley-Silver Prize for Best First Book in Civil War History will also be awarded on September 29 at 4:00pm. The recipient this year is Matthew Hulbert, author of The Ghosts of Guerrilla Memory: How Civil War Bushwhackers Became Gunslingers in the American West.

The program of events for the conference can be found at <http://www.civilwarcenter.olemiss.edu/Conference2017.shtml>. For more information about the conference or the Wiley-Silver Prize, see <http://www.civilwarcenter.olemiss.edu/index.shtml> or contact civilwar@olemiss.edu.

Contact Info:

Sarah Elliott

Doctoral Student and Graduate Assistant

Center for Civil War Research

Arch Dalrymple III Department of History

The University of Mississippi

selliott1@go.olemiss.edu

Contact Email:

civilwar@olemiss.edu

URL:

<http://www.civilwarcenter.olemiss.edu/index.shtml>