Contact the Editors

Page published by System Administrator on Monday, February 4, 2019

Meet the Editors
Rajeshwari Dutt is Associate Professor at the Indian Institute of Technology Mandi (India). She obtained her Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) from Harvard University, the Harvard Academy for International and Area Studies, and the Notre Dame Institute for Advanced Studies. Her current work frames the emergence of development discourses as an exercise in asserting national sovereignty based in ecological extraction.

Harvard Business School, the Harvard Academy for International and Area Studies, and the Notre Dame Institute for Advanced Studies. Her current work focuses on Indigenous and European relations in colonial Mexico. He has published multiple articles and books including, The Social History of Alcohol and Drugs (2019), a history of how local and migrant villagers, plantation owners, and investors constrained and contributed to the emergence of a coffee economy at the turn of the twentieth century. His research has appeared in the Hispanic American Historical Review, The Business History Review, and ISTOR. See http://www.yachana.org/.

Ulices Piña
Ulices Piña is Assistant Professor of History at California State University, Long Beach. His research and teaching interests include Mexico, Modern Latin America, state-making, revolutions, and social movements. Piña’s research has been supported by the Fulbright Commission in Mexico (COMEXUS), the University of California Institute for Mexico and the United States (UC-MEXUS), and the National Institute of Historical Studies on the Revolutions of Mexico (INERHMR). Prior to joining the faculty at CSULB, he taught at Colorado College where he was a postdoctoral fellow and a visiting faculty member of the history department.

Gretchen Pierce
Gretchen Pierce is Associate Professor of History at Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania where she serves as the university's 2020-2021 Scholar Educator. Her research focuses on the intersections between the temperance movement, the state-building process, and the project of identity formation in revolutionary Mexico. She is the co-editor, with Aurea Toxqui, of Alcohol in Latin America (2014). She has also written chapters and articles in Irruption in Mexico (forthcoming), Alcohol in Latin America: A Companion to Mexican History and Culture (2011), and The Social History of Alcohol and Drugs (2009). She is currently working on a manuscript entitled “Altered States.” She became an editor of H-LatAm in 2019 and also founded the academic research blog Research Corner/Rincón del Investigador/Canto do Pesquisador.

Jonathan Truitt
Jonathan Truitt is Professor of Latin American and World History and director of the Center for Learning through Games and Simulations at Central Michigan University. His research focuses on Indigenous and European relations in colonial Mexico City. He has published multiple articles and books including, Native Wills from the Colonial Americas: Dead Giveaways in a New World. Ed. with Mark Christensen. Salt Lake City: University of Utah Press, 2016; Sustaining the Divine in Mexico Tenochtitlan: Nahua and Catholicism, 1523-1700. Norman: University of Oklahoma Press and the Academy of American Franciscan History, 2019; and Mexico In Revolution, 1910-1920. With Stephany Slaughter. Part of the Reacting to the Past series. New York: W. W. Norton, 2019. His current research focuses on the intersections of cultural development around board games during the colonial period. The idea for this project developed as a result of his pedagogical work in game-based learning.

Casey Marina Lurtz
Casey Marina Lurtz is Assistant Professor of History at Johns Hopkins University. Her research focuses on the ideas and realities of development in nineteenth century Latin America. She is the author of From the Grounds Up: Building an Export Economy in Southern Mexico (Stanford University Press, 2019), a history of how local and migrant villagers, plantation owners, and investors constrained and contributed to the emergence of a coffee economy at the turn of the twentieth century. Her research has appeared in the Hispanic American Historical Review, the Business History Review, and ISTOR and has been supported by fellowships at the UC San Diego Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies, the Harvard Business School, the Harvard Academy for International and Area Studies, and the Notre Dame Institute for Advanced Studies. Her current work frames the emergence of development discourses as an exercise in asserting national sovereignty based in ecological extraction. Casey Lurtz has been the book reviews editor for H-LatAm since 2016.

Rajeshwari Dutt
Rajeshwari Dutt is Associate Professor at the Indian Institute of Technology Mandi (India). She obtained her Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) from Franklin & Marshall College (2004) and her M.A. and Ph.D. in Social and Cultural History from Carnegie Mellon University (2012). Her research interests are in race and imperialism in nineteenth century Latin America and the Caribbean. She has published journal articles in The Americas, Ethnohistory, Hispanic American Historical Review and World History Commentary. She is the author of two monographs: Maya Caciques in Early National Yucatán (2017) and Empire on Edge: The British Struggle for Order in Belize during Yucatán's Caste War, 1847-1901 (2020). She is currently working on a monograph on the Nicaraguan canal route in the nineteenth century. She is also interested in exploring how historical fiction can complement academic history in dissemination of historical knowledge.