

Forms of History and Community Forms: Race, Place, and Historical Narratives in the New South

Page published by System Administrator on Wednesday, February 13, 2019

Chair and Commentator: Tracy Revels, Wofford College

This panel investigates forms of history that emerge in public space and in historical narratives that shape—and are shaped by—the spaces they inhabit. Focusing on several historically significant communities in central Florida and southwest Georgia, panelists explore a variety of narrative forms that town promoters—past and present—deployed to promote and define their communities to each other and to the outside world. From the late nineteenth century to the present, these forms of public memory have created appealing mythologies and supplied strategies of empowerment and self-definition. Such narratives were written literally and metaphorically in newspapers and tourism materials, on plaques, in murals, in monuments, in historic preservation, in commemorative festivals, and in urban design. While many of these public texts have been intentionally created by historical societies, writers, municipalities or and booster associations, others are unintentional stories evident only through their absence, or implied in the very brick and mortar of a streetscape’s placement, a building’s location in the landscape or decisions about preservation. The panel explores the power dynamics inherent in these historical forms.

Recorded in April 2018 at the OAH Annual Meeting held in Sacramento, California as part of the Mellon-funded Amplified Initiative.

Introductions

---

Advocating for a New Life: The Winter Park Advocate and the Black Experience
Julian Chambliss, Rollins College

---

Beyond Zora’s Eatonville: Black Labor, White Capital, and the Neo-Abolitionist Origins of Central Florida’s Model Townships
Scot French, University of Central Florida

---

“The Best” Place “on Earth”: Narratives of Southern Town Promotion and Identity
Emily Mieras, Stetson University

Citation: System Administrator. Forms of History and Community Forms: Race, Place, and Historical Narratives in the New South. Race and Ethnicity Hub. 02-15-2019.

<https://networks.h-net.org/node/68552/pages/3707811/forms-history-and-community-forms-race-place-and-historical-narratives>

Licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 3.0 United States License.

OAH Members can access all of the recorded panels by logging into the member portal at the OAH website.