On 13, 14 and 15 November 2019, the II International Congress of Young Researchers in Middle Ages (ICRMA) will take place at the University of Évora, Portugal. ICRMA is destined to students at master, doctoral and postdoctoral level and/or to those who have obtained their academic degrees in the last five years. It aims to be an interdisciplinary space for dissemination, discussion and contact among young researchers who study the Middle Ages from various perspectives: history, archeology, art history, literature, philosophy, philology, anthropology, ethnology, sociology, geography, methodology, among other areas.

In this 2nd ICRMA, the theme will be "Space(s)". We will only accept proposals related with this theme. Each proposal must fall within one of the following thematic strands:

1. Sources and methodologies
2. Iconographic and textual representations
3. Manifestations of power and authority
4. Contrasts and convergences between spaces
5. Mental conceptions of space
