Introduction

The engagement of stakeholders has become imperative to develop and deliver services to citizens and customers worldwide. Individual or group participation in organisations including community engagements can help organisations to understand their needs and resolve issues of public concern. The civic engagement can help management to refine internal and external processes using strategic leadership initiatives for the overall development of organisations.

Strategic leadership create organisational structures, manage resources and thereafter convert crafted visions to reality. The leaders need to apply civic engagement frameworks to remain competitive in this current global landscape for overall development of organisations.

Objective

The research book is expected to showcase civic engagement frameworks using strategic leadership practices, tools and techniques to bring significant change in organisations for development. The strategic competencies and proven capabilities of leaders along with engagement of stakeholders are expected to become role models of organisations worldwide.
