The Centre for European Studies and the Department of History of Chulalongkorn University (Bangkok, THAILAND) will host an international workshop on "Other Voices: European Influence in the Cold War in Asia" on 20-21 January 2020.

The workshop is aimed to investigate alternative perspectives on the development of the Cold War in Asia, especially in terms of involvement and influences of Europe both as individual nations and a community of nations through the processes decolonization of Asia as well as European involvement in the Cold War through the formation of various international bodies--NATO, the European Union, the Warsaw Pact, etc. We hope to expand the horizon of our understanding of the Cold War in Asia beyond being the site of proxy wars between the US and the USSR or simply a backdrop for the rise of Maoist China as the third Cold War superpower. This investigation might also better our understanding of decolonization in Asia and the various success or failure to modernize, develop and democratize across the Asian continent, depending on each country's colonial history, decolonizing experience and participation in the Cold War.

Interested parties should send a proposal including an abstract (>300 words) and a brief bio to othervoices.coldwar@gmail.com before 15 November 2019.

Proposals selected for the workshop would be announced on 20 November 2019

Organizers would provide up to 3 nights accommodation in Bangkok through the course of the workshop and partial travel expenses.
