Location:

Egypt

Subject Fields:

Ancient History, Archaeology, Art, Art History & Visual Studies, Classical Studies, Religious Studies and Theology

The Theodore N. Romanoff Prize is open to doctoral candidates (ABD) and recent Ph.D. recipients (degree granted between 2015-2019) conducting research on the language or historical texts of ancient Egypt, including the Coptic language as the final stage of historic Egyptian languages. American scholars worldwide and non-American scholars studying or teaching at an American university in the United States are eligible to apply. Research must be conducted in Egypt.

The Prize was created in tribute to Theodore Romanoff who received his M.A. from The Artemis A.W. and Martha Sharp Joukowsky Institute for Archaeology and the Ancient World at Brown University. His thesis concerned hieroglyphic writing; he additionally studied Demotic and Coptic with dedication and passion.

Beginning this year, applicants may apply for this funding as a stand-alone fellowship or combine it with other funding sources, including the ARCE CAORC or NEH-funded fellowships. The successful grantee must properly credit the Romanoff Prize in all future publications and presentations. S/he is required to present a lecture on their research at the ARCE N.Y. Chapter at the completion of the fellowship. Awardees may reapply for the Romanoff Prize after three years. One $4000 fellowship will be funded annually.
