

The Darby Library Company

Blog Post published by Joseph-James Ahern on Thursday, January 22, 2015

As part of our Repository blog series, we are reposting another of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania's Archival Adventures in Small Repositories. This month's entry is on the Darby Library Company - an institution that was founded back in 1743. Enjoy Celia Caust-Ellenbogen's review of this interesting repository - with connections to John Bartram. The post can be found at: <http://hsp.org/blogs/archival-adventures-in-small-repositories/books-bartrams-and-burglars...>

As always, if you are interested in providing a blog entry for a repository you work for are affiliated with, we are always happy to have them.

Posted in:

Pennsylvania Repositories