

Society for the Anthropology of Europe Graduate Student Paper Prize Competition deadline extended to July 15

Discussion published by Nadeen Thomas on Sunday, June 7, 2020

Dear all,

The deadline for the Graduate Student Paper Prize Competition has been extended to July 15.

Winners will be mentored to publish their papers. Also, the winning paper will receive a $400 award and will be automatically submitted for publication in the journal Social Anthropology. Candidates should therefore send their most mature and original work in article format. Word limit is 7,000, inclusive of abstract, main text, and references. Manuscripts must be written in English (original or translation) and must not have previously appeared in print or online media. Limit of one submission per person. The committee will evaluate originality, contribution to the field, inclusivity of diverse perspectives, and writing style appropriate for a manuscript in preparation for publication.

At the time of submission, authors must be graduate students in anthropology or related fields in a university anywhere in the world. There is no citizenship requirement, and women, gender nonconforming, and underrepresented scholars are strongly encouraged to apply. Candidates will be notified by early August of the review committee's decision.

Interested graduate students are invited to submit their previously unpublished work, along with a title page that includes contact information and affiliation, via email to Dr. Julie Kleinman (jkleinman3@fordham.edu) by July 15, 2020, with the subject line "SAE Paper Prize Submission."

All the best,

Vasiliki Neofotistos

SAE Membership and Public Relations Chair Committee

neofotis@buffalo.edu