

Minorities in Contemporary and Historical Perspective Series: Summer Break!

Discussion published by Emmanuel Dalle Mulle on Thursday, June 25, 2020

Dear Subscribers,

Our Minorities in Contemporary and Historical Perspective Series will go on holidays until the beginning of the next academic year. In September, we will resume posting content on topics related to majorities and minorities in collaboration with the Centre on Constitutional Change based at the University of Edinburgh. In the meantime, please feel free to comment on the previous posts, which you can find at: <https://networks.h-net.org/node/3911/pages/5740772/minorities-contemporary-and-historical-perspectives-monthly-series>

We seize the occasion to thank all scholars who have contributed to the series so far!

We wish you a nice summer and all the best,

Emmanuel Dalle Mulle and Mona Bieling

The Minorities in Contemporary and Historical Perspective series is organized by the Myth of Homogeneity Research Project at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Geneva.

For more information, please visit: <https://themythofhomogeneity.org/>