The Liberal Arts Collective at the Pennsylvania State University is launching a podcast, "Unraveling the Anthropocene: Race, Environment, and Pandemic," which will run during Fall 2020 to early Spring 2021.

This podcast seeks to interview a variety of academics, artists, activists, or community members to feature their work and experiences as they try to understand, explain, alleviate, or simply capture the contemporary phenomena that fall under these themes.

Speakers will be volunteering to remotely record a 15-minute long informal conversation about their work or experience. Parallel events include a reading group and a closing roundtable. Podcast speakers may be considered for the final roundtable as well.

- To propose/participate, please send a 250 word description of your project and an updated C.V. to libarts.co@gmail.com, with "podcast speaker" as the subject.

- Submissions will be considered throughout the academic year, but those who contact us before October 15th will take priority for Fall episodes.
