Extended the application deadline: March 22, 2021

In response to the pandemic and the continuing potential health risks, we have decided to offer our courses online to keep faculty and participants safe. Course organizers will be adapting their courses to the online format using all available opportunities to keep them lively and interactive and will make sure to create space for networking between peers and faculty. Short, live faculty presentations and pre-recorded lectures will alternate leading in both facilitated and independent small group discussions in breakout rooms, followed up by plenary sessions, one-on-one consultations with faculty, individual or group assignments and presentations, digital fieldwork, and more.
