Academica Press, a leading independent publisher of non-fiction with offices in Washington, DC and London, invites manuscripts from scholars offering original book-length projects. New publications will ideally be devoted to issues in the humanities, social sciences, law, business, science, and other fields. Academica Press's list encompasses international relations, history, philosophy, literature, linguistics, religion, cultural and regional studies, the arts, anthropology, and political science and public policy. Proposals for innovative work are welcome, especially for complete or near-complete manuscripts.
