CFP for special issue of Safundi: The Journal of South African and American Studies.

Calls to isolate South Africa economically, politically, socially accelerated in the 1970s and 1980s. Perhaps nowhere did the debate over engagement with apartheid South Africa play out as visibly and as vocally as on college and university campuses. And yet our grasp of the history of anti-apartheid movements on college and university campuses is sketchy and episodic.

For this special issue of Safundi: The Journal of South African and American Studies we are looking to begin to flesh out these histories. Although we will entertain traditional articles, we are as interested in shorter pieces (1500-5000 words) that may look at a single campus, or even a single event on a campus. We welcome personal reflections and participant accounts as well as brief historical works. We encourage faculty, graduate students, and independent scholars to investigate how the anti-apartheid campaigns manifested on their campuses, or the campuses of their alma mater, or of those near where they grew up.

This special issue will not strive for comprehensiveness but rather looks to create a pastiche, to begin to fill in gaps in a historiography that has as many potential directions as there are campuses across the globe.

We are requesting proposals of approximately 200 words and a brief biographical sketch of each author. These proposals are due September 15, 2021. We will inform authors by October 15, 2021, and final contributions will be due by January 15, 2022.

Please submit proposals (MS Word preferred) to Derek Catsam at derekcatsam@hotmail.com and Annel Pieterse at annel.pieterse@gmail.com
