

Tentative Special Education Journal

Announcement published by Marquis Grant on Friday, November 17, 2017

Type:

Call for Volunteers

Date:

December 15, 2017

Subject Fields:

Teaching and Learning, Research and Methodology

I am looking for individuals to serve as editorial reviews for a journal focusing on special education.

This journal will explore policies, practices and issues that are relevant to special education in the United States and abroad. Areas of interest will include (but are not limited to): research-based instructional practices, use of assistive technology, policies and laws governing the education of children with disabilities, current trends in special education , co-teaching relationships between special education and general education teachers, and special education emphasis in teacher education programs.

This journal will be an international peer reviewed medium for the publication of articles of interest to researchers in special education. It will include reports of case studies, experiments and surveys, discussions of conceptual and methodological issues and of underlying assumptions in educational research, accounts of research in progress, and book reviews.
