Genocide Studies International: Call For Papers

Discussion published by Megan Reid on Tuesday, November 9, 2021

Genocide Studies International invites submissions of manuscripts focused on themes of genocide, human rights, crimes against humanity, and related mass atrocities for upcoming editions of the journal.

This peer-reviewed journal is dedicated to raising knowledge and awareness around these issues by providing a forum for the publication of original academic research that take interdisciplinary and comparative approaches to critically analyze genocide and other forms of mass violence. Due to the constantly evolving and complex nature of genocide and related crimes, Genocide Studies International seeks manuscripts from across disciplines that contextualize these issues in relation to conflict, exploitation, colonialism, racism, bigotry, sexism, oppression, and globalization. Manuscripts that explore challenges and prospects for the long-term prevention of genocide, as well as those that focus on global and regional threats to human security, especially as they relate to genocide, are also welcomed.

Submission deadlines for upcoming general issues:

December 15, 2021
March 15, 2022
August 15, 2022

Submissions after these deadlines will be considered for future issues.

Submissions can be made at https://mc04.manuscriptcentral.com/utp_gsi. Submissions should follow Genocide Studies International’s submission guidelines.

All other inquiries can be directed to Megan Reid at gsi@genocidestudies.org.