About the H-Net Book Channel

Page published by H-Net Book Channel on Monday, November 9, 2015

The Book Channel is a book announcement service that helps readers stay informed about recently published titles in their fields. The service imports new publisher catalogs via the Edelweiss service and sorts them into 56 different field lists. Readers can browse all new titles and the list of publishers imported thus far.

The H-Net Book Channel also publishes original editorial content that aims to contextualize and comment on new trends in academic publishing. These include short historiographical essays, pieces connecting headlines to deeper academic research, and ideas for incorporating new publications into classroom teaching.

There are no requirements to subscribe to the H-Net Book Channel. Subscribers will receive email notifications once editorial content is published. An RSS feed is available at the bottom of every individual book list.

To learn about what's happening on the Book Channel, follow us on Twitter @HNetBookChannel or get in touch at bookchannel@mail.h-net.msu.edu.