Cornell University's 2021-2022 Judith Reppy Institute for Peace and Conflict Studies Graduate Fellows are pleased to announce the fifth annual Reppy Institute graduate student conference, to be held on Saturday, April 23, 2022. We hope to elicit submissions from graduate students whose work seeks to answer questions pertaining to global peace and conflict using innovative methods, novel theoretical applications, and creative interdisciplinary approaches.

This conference invites submission of abstracts from graduate students from fields including, but not limited to, government, sociology, history, science and technology studies, anthropology, philosophy, law, and communications. Topics should be related to the Reppy Institute's interest in the problems of war and peace, arms control and disarmament, and instances of collective violence.

Questions that we expect to be useful for developing abstracts for this conference include, but are not limited to:

- 1) How do law, technology, peace, and conflict intersect, both conceptually and in historical or contemporary contexts?
- 2) How have national/international legal structures been used to mediate conflicts and define peace?
- 3) How have technologies been deployed in peace/conflict scenarios? How do specific technological artifacts or systems embody the politics of peace or conflict?

Applications should be submitted via our website:

The deadline for submissions is February 20, 2022. Submissions should include a 300 to 500 word abstract explaining the topic, theoretical framework, methodology, implications of the scholarship, and a brief statement highlighting the interdisciplinary nature of the work. Scholars whose submissions are accepted will be notified by March 1, 2022. Participants will be offered a modest stipend of up to $500 to defray their expenses for travel, room and board.
