Contemporary Jewry is soliciting manuscripts for a special issue on the Pew Research Center’s Jewish Americans in 2020 study. We are interested in full-length manuscripts (8-10,000 words) as well as shorter pieces focusing on a specific aspect of the study. Analyses of the Pew data that address important issues related to contemporary Jewry are welcome, as well as comparisons to other surveys, critical essays, and suggestions for future research are examples of (but not inclusive of all) the topics of interest.

Clarity of focus, appropriate scholarly grounding of the research question and analysis, representation of diverging viewpoints, and insightful suggestions will be among the criteria for selection.

Interested contributors are welcome to email an initial abstract to me for feedback, although this is not a requirement.

All manuscripts should be submitted to the Contemporary Jewry editorial manager by July 1, 2022, designated as S.I.: PEW 2020.

For details on the submission process, please see https://www.springer.com/social+sciences/sociology/journal/12397?detailsPage=pltcj_1060550
