The editors of Buildings & Landscapes: Journal of the Vernacular Architecture Forum invite submissions to be considered for issue 30.1 (spring 2023) by May 15, 2022. They also review article manuscripts on a rolling basis, so submissions are welcome at any time (but may be considered for a later issue).

The editors encourage the submission of scholarly articles that integrate fieldwork and archival/primary source research into an original argument about the history of everyday buildings and/or landscapes. The editors particularly welcome the submission of articles on topics related to the study of North American vernacular architecture or which otherwise broaden the context of North American architecture and cultural landscapes. Authors are urged to draw linkages between the physical aspects of the built environment they study and the people who create, consume, use, and inhabit it. If an author is unsure about a manuscript’s fit for the journal, they are encouraged to contact the editors in advance of a formal submission. Complete author guidelines may be found here.

Please contact the editors directly for inquiries or manuscript submissions: Lydia Mattice Brandt (lbrandt.usc@gmail.com) and Michael Chiarappa (mchiarappa2@washcoll.edu). Inquiries about reviews can be directed to the Review Editor: Rachel Leibowitz (rachel.leibowitz@gmail.com).
