Storytelling as Pedagogy
Historical Biographies in STEM and Social Studies
July 15-16, 2024
Join us as we explore the value and use of historical biographies in contemporary STEM and social studies education. Participants will discuss how sharing the stories of diverse scientists can help young girls and people of color see themselves as valuable contributors to the field, historically and in the future, through presentations, panel discussions, and curriculum workshops.

Registration is $65 per person or $15 for K-12 teachers and graduate students, and includes all activities, materials, and meals. For more information, contact biographies@sciencehistory.org.

View the full program & register to attend!

sciencehistory.org/caininconference