This course offers the opportunity to explore specific issues and texts in the humanities. The issues and readings will vary, but students will gain a better understanding of contemporary thought and methods in philosophy, history or literature, especially as they relate to critical issues in art and design.

Course Content [for this specific offering of this course]

Once one begins to notice, it becomes clear that animals play a central role in how meaning is made in the arts and humanities. This course deals with how and why visual, narrative and metaphorical depictions of animals affect our ways of being with animals in aesthetic, activist, environmental and biological contexts. You will be looking closely at these roles through examples in the arts, literature, media, film, design and performance. You will also be reading materials from a range of areas - literary theory, philosophy, history, art and film history, sociology, anthropology and critical theory - and encouraged to think about how representing animals differs from "using" them; how do these representations affect animals themselves; how do literature, the arts, media and design respond to, and act upon ethical and political debates particularly the rights of animals. In what new ways can literature, the arts, film, design and media affect our ethical relationships with animals?

Course Learning Outcomes

The primary goal of this course is for students to understand and to critically evaluate various ethical perspectives on human beings' interactions with animals and how these perspectives' are related to environmental, political, social, cultural and economic issues. An important secondary goal is to provide students with opportunities to see how others have questioned these perspectives and how they might also ask these questions in their chosen areas of cultural work.

Evaluation Criteria definitions

Opportunities for understanding these perspectives will be offered through readings, written summaries, class discussion, films and videos and other media. Students' projects will include essays, presentations, and art, media and design projects and proposals.

General Notes (policies and procedures)

- The instructor may modify the material or schedule specified in this outline. Any required changes will be announced in class.
- Late assignments or projects may be penalized as specified in the course outline.
- It is plagiarism to present someone else's work or ideas as one's own. Plagiarism may result in failure on an assignment, of the course, and, if repeated, expulsion from the Institute. Assistance with the ethical practices of attribution and documentation is available from the Writing Centre or online at www.eciad.ca/wc
- A student must provide a doctor's note to Student Services for any illness which causes the student to miss assignments, tests, projects, exams, etc., or for absences of more than two classes. At the discretion of the instructor the student may complete the work for a prorated grade.
- Students will demonstrate that they understand and practice the safe use of tools and other equipment, materials, and processes used in their course projects. They will conduct themselves in a responsible manner that does not endanger themselves or others, and will adhere to the area procedures regarding authorized operation of equipment, handling of materials, and use of space.
- Students with special needs or disabilities that might affect their experience or performance in class are advised to inform their instructor and/or contact the Disabilities Services Coordinator, located in Student Services, for assistance.
- Professional counseling or therapy is available at no charge to students who have concerns of a personal nature. All information shared is held in strict confidence. Call 604.844.3850 or 604.844.3081 for an appointment with the support counselor.
- The Writing Centre is a service that Emily Carr provides to all students, staff and faculty from every program area who would like to improve their reading, writing, critical thinking, and research skills. This is a free, voluntary and confidential service. Writing Centre instructors can help you at every stage of your writing, from developing ideas to final revision. This applies to any kind of writing, from a three line artist's statement to a twenty page academic paper. Please sign up for a ½ hour appointment on the door (room 435 SB). Telephone: 604 629 4511, Coordinator: Karolle Wall.
- Email is an official means of communication with ECI students by the faculty, administration and other service providers on campus. Email routing will be confined to the Institute's internal communication network, and delivered to an officially assigned and verifiable Institute Email Address (IEA). All users are bound by the provisions of ECI Policy 415: Code of Conduct for Appropriate Use of Information Technology Facilities and Services (outlined on ECI website and Emily's A to Z). Instructors will outline and detail the expected extent and parameters of email use in this course in the first class, and clarify the timeframe for checking and responding to emails.
