

Imperial Muslims

Islam, Community and Authority in the Indian Ocean, 1839-1937

Scott S. Reese (Northern Arizona University)

A transregional history of Muslim community in the British Empire

'A tremendously valuable and highly readable contribution, one that has filled a serious gap in our reading of modern Indian Ocean history, and that has also added significant depth to our understanding of Muslim religious life under colonial rule. It is beautifully written, deeply textured, and eminently accessible... Moreover, it is organized in a way that allows for a classroom instructor to assign individual chapters as well as the whole book.'

– Fahad Ahmad Bishara, Die Welt des Islams

'Complex and compelling...Reese's insightful exposition has the possibility of stimulating new discussions of issues of concern to those of us working on configurations of Muslim community and modernizing transformations much further afield.'

– R. Michael Feener, Journal of Islamic Studies
